A MESSAGE FROM

Michael O'Sullivan,

CEO of Burlington Stores

Burlington

Our associates, customers, and communities represent a widely diverse culture. This diversity makes the events of the past week that much more difficult for us all, as well as for me as a leader. As a member of the Burlington team, I'd like to reaffirm our commitment to embracing inclusivity, and being part of the struggle for fairness and equality for all.

Part of this commitment means speaking up when we see injustice in the world that needs to be corrected. We saw that injustice displayed recently in the cruel death of George Floyd at the hands of Minneapolis police officers.

We want to acknowledge the pain and anger we're feeling right now – not just about the most recent events we've witnessed, but also about a long history of racial injustice and inequality. It's not right. It may have been our past, but it CANNOT be our future.

We don't have all the answers. But we're committed to work together, both within our company and within the broader community, to move our world closer to unity, understanding, and inclusivity.

#BlackLivesMatter
